Toronto Charges 'Campus' Red Run

(By Canadian University Press)

Conflicting statements hit the front page of "The Varsity," University of Toronto daily, Friday, when Miss Denyse Gassyt, Secretary of the publication committee of "Campus," a journal of student opinion, charged that its editor deliberately suppressed or modified all articles contradicting the Communist Party line.

In a statement to the Varsity, Miss Gassyt said that an L.P.P. majority on the Editorial Board used the publication as a "subtle means of intrusion of Communist propaganda." She said that many members of the Committee had objected to the continuous Communist slanting of articles on foreign policy.

Her charges were corroborated by an ex-member of the Board who stated that he had tendered his resignation from the publication committee and staff because he felt he could no longer lend his support to the turning out of what amounted in many cases to Communist propaganda. There seemed no hope of altering the trend, he said.

Other members of the Board objected vigorously to Miss Gassyt's statement to The Varsity. One maintained that her charges could only be interpreted as an act of reprisal following the rejection by the publications committee of her article on "Russian Wives" in which she criticized Soviet domestic policy. Another claimed that the article had only been submitted to satisfy the writer's desire to see her name in print. He felt that "space could be better used for vital issues than to satisfy the ego of certain individuals."

Others justified the slant in the articles printed in the "Campus" in maintaining that "it had followed the Communist line only to the extent that it had refused to join the current hysterical attacks on Russia and had refused to support the Marshall Plan and similar programs of reaction." The purpose of any journal of student opinion is lost if it present a conflicting mind to the public, it was said.

It was announced that a meeting of the Publications Committee would be held to investigate Miss Gassyt's charges more fully.

COTC Parade To Be Held on Armistice Day

In keeping with its policy of holding one parade in uniform during the University term, the McGill University Contingent, COTC, will take part in a parade to be held on Remembrance Day, Nov. 11. Nov. 11 will be a holiday for all university and public and high school students and it is hoped by the parade that the spirit of the day will be maintained.

Both Officers and Officer Cadets will take part in the parade. They will wear berets, full battle dress, web belts, puttees and brown gloves. Twelve Officer Cadets from Dawson will be included in the parade.

At 10 a.m. the officer guide and marker will report to Lt. J. R. C. Surprenant, Adjutant of the Parade. The parade will fall in at 10:20. The service will then follow. There will be a laying of the wreath followed by a two minutes silence and then Unit will march off at about 12 minutes past 11.

The McGill Contingent will follow the Royal Canadian Navy, leading all other Army Units, and the entire parade will march past the Cenotaph. The Unit will move north on Cathedral and Metcalfe Sts., west on Sherbrooke past the Saluting Base, 1195 Sherbrooke St. right on Cote des Neiges Rd. to Pine Ave. and thence to the Gymnasium-Armoury for dismissal.

Following the ceremonies a reception will be held in the Officers Mess to which all Officers, Officer Cadets and their ladies are invited.

Veterans Soc. Plans Changes In Constitution

Ask For Approval On Wed. Nov. 13 Quorum Vote

At the meeting of the Veterans' Society on Tuesday last, a motion was passed which provides for election of officers by ballot and for enrolment in the Society at the time of casting the ballot. The following is the proposal which it is planned to present on November 13th:

1. Motion that Article VI of the Constitution be amended to read as follows:

Article VI. Voting.

Section 1. Any amendment to the Constitution shall be effected by a majority vote of the bona fide membership and shall take effect when approved by the Students' Executive Council.

Section 2. For any meeting of the Society 200 members shall constitute a quorum.

Section 3. Any motion must be

Revue Calls for Stage Crew, Musicians & Script Writers

By EUGENE JOUSSE

Due to the unusual nature of this year's Revue, the production staff has taken stock and now makes the following call. The Music Director would like to have at least twenty male voices as well as a possible fifteen women singers. A combination of the above will form a chorus which will furnish feature numbers as well as background music. This group will not be used on-stage and therefore no stage experience is required of its members.

The Technical Director will be forming his crew very shortly and would like to meet any person desirous of doing some hard work. Plans have been made to keep the period of construction very short this year, but during this period the hours will be long. It is only natural that those who dig in on scenery construction will form the stage crew for the presentation.

Attached to the stage crew will be that all important outfit, the Prop Crew. A little farther behind the scenes will be the Costume Mistress and her crew. Welcoming the happy customers there will be the Front of the House Staff.

Gerry O'Brien would still like to hear from the many writers on the campus who have ideas for skits and production numbers. All he asks is that your number be at least written out when you visit him in his office. Malcolm Smith, the Music Director, will be only too happy to discuss your latest composition with you.

In short, this is the all-out appeal to the many students on our campus who are too shy or too busy just now to get behind the Revue and really push. There is not another activity at college which calls for so many diversified talents.

The Revue expects a lot from you and in return you will find a crowd that is bound together by an extraordinary spirit. If you are in Fourth Year and feel that you have missed something during your stay at McGill, get into the Revue. If you are in First Year and are still looking around for something to keep you from being a dull person, come down and develop a habit which will last four years.

Watch the Daily for time of interviews and auditions. We will try to publish notices in such a manner that there will be a minimum of confusion. Let's get behind the Producer and help him make this the Revue of Revues.

Ball will be on sale today at the Union Truck Shop at $3.00 per couple and table reservations will also be taken today in the Union. Dawson College students will be able to purchase tickets from Mr. Hilliard, Secretary-Treasurer of the Dawson Students' Society. (Daily Photo-Hall-Walmesley.)

IRC Hears Sauve Report on Tour

By Henri-Paul Farand
Jacques Brazeau

New York, November 10.—(C.U.P.)—President Maurice Sauve of N.F.C.U.S. was the guest speaker at the Annual Conference of the International Relations Clubs opening Saturday at Mount Clair College. "The Student's Place in International Affairs" was the topic of Mr. Sauve's address to 250 delegates of over a hundred universities and colleges of the Middle Atlantic States, Ontario and Quebec.

Mr. Sauve's Address

A very special responsibility rests on the student who has the good fortune of life in a democracy, said University of Montreal's Mr. Sauve. A study of humanities, social sciences, foreign languages prepares him to play an important role in human affairs, both during the period of his studies and after graduation. A greater understanding of the problems of man is found with the help of the discipline of formal studies, continued the speaker, but, as I.R.C. meetings have shown, the usefulness of contacts with the people who are already in the field of international affairs and the advantages of discussion amongst students cannot be over-estimated.

Pointing out ways in which the students should presently play an important role, the Canadian guest asserted that the greatest contribution of the student world is possible only if co-operation exists between all different student bodies and youth movements that promote international understanding.

Fine Arts Soc. New Club To Meet Soon

The newly formed Fine Arts Society was accepted last week by the S.E.C. as a recognized campus club. The object as stated in the constitution is to keep the student body abreast of the contemporary development of the fine arts throughout the world.

Fine Arts, guest speakers, visiting artists and discussion groups all will be part of the program of activities. The scope of Fine Art is very great, including the dance, literature, music, the theatre, architecture, painting, and the minor arts. There will be some emphasis on painting as it is one of the most active of the arts in Canada, and is largely centered here in Montreal.

All undergraduates of the university are eligible for membership in the Fine Arts Society, and it is expected that there will be great response to this new club.

The establishment of the club coincides with the initiation this year of two new courses in the faculty of Arts and Science. These courses, one lecture course of Introductory Art, and a practical art course, are given by Professor Davis and Dr. Lismer respectively, both of the Art Association of Montreal.

The first meeting of the McGill Fine Arts Society will be held shortly, and announced in The Daily columns sufficiently ahead of time to give everyone interested in becoming a member a chance of attending.

Canada's Resources Topic Of First Mock Parliament

By PAUL BETTS

The year's first Mock Parliament will be held Wednesday, November 12 at 8 p.m., in the ballroom of the McGill Union, it was announced last night by Jack Smith, chairman of the steering committee.

The Liberal Party, as the Government Party, will present a Bill dealing with the development of natural resources. The Progressive Conservative Party will act as the Opposition.

Dr. J. B. Rolih, Assistant Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Science, will act as Governor-General, and Professor Mallory, of the Department of Economics and Political Science, will be Speaker.

New Program Is Offered by Film Society

Starting this week, and continuing till the end of the session, McGill students, Faculty members and Graduates will be afforded an opportunity to see a wide variety of other than Hollywood films in the weekly programs to be presented by the McGill Film Society. The first two organizational meetings of the Society executive have been held have been made to present the first of the year's showings on Thursday afternoon. Further information on the films to be shown will appear in the Daily.

The Film Society is a jointly sponsored student-faculty-graduate endeavor and as such is a unique organization on the campus. Financed by the Student's Society and the Montreal Branch of the Graduate's Society, its privileges may be enjoyed free of charge by all students, faculty members and graduates alike. The Executive Committee has representatives from each of these groups and this year consists of: Graduate Representatives: Mr. Gordon B. Glasco, Col. D. Stuart Forbes; Faculty Representatives: Prof. N. J. Berill, Dr. Gerard R. Lomer. Student Representatives: Pres., Fitzgerald Allison, Sec., Norma Walmesley, Treas., Ken Gates, Publicity, Gordon Barrington, Librarian, Betty Ann MacNichol, Advisory, Phil Goffon.

The Film Society has, in the past, co-operated on various showings with other Clubs and Societies on the campus. The members of the Executive will welcome any suggestions or requests concerning films in which such groups may be interested.

Following is a complete text of the Government Bill and of the P.C. Amendment:

Liberal Bill

RESOLVED that the Department of Mines and Resources, under the direction of the Minister, expend such monies as Parliament shall from time to time authorize towards the following objective:

1. to expand the existing programme of Governmental research in the fields of base-metal mining, forest industries and hydro-electric power;
2. to promote by tax concessions, subsidies and, where necessary, by the establishment of Crown Corporations the development and exploitation of the natural resources of Canada in the above-mentioned fields;
3. to ensure in the allocation of these services that the raw materials thus produced be channeled into Canadian secondary industries;
4. to provide adequate transportation services through the construction of

Round Table Conf. Held by Coeds Union

The monthly Round Table Conference of clubs and societies under the Women's Union took place on Friday last. Budgets were presented, and informal reports of activities past and planned.

The Executive has expressed a desire to see as much club activity as possible this year, and announced a re-arrangement of club sponsorship between the S.E.C. and their own organization, to follow a careful survey. As a result, the Women's Union will give priority for budget allotment and meeting space to all women's organizations, since it receives money from women students only. To enable clubs to proceed with their plans, however, all groups under the Women's Union now will continue so for this session.

At the annual meeting on November 17 all clubs are asked to present a brief report—150 words. The following clubs had no representatives at the Round Table discussion, and are asked to hand in estimates of their 1947-48 expenses before November 18: The School for Graduate Nurses, the Social Service Committee, Club Hispanico, and the Women's Medical, the Sociological, and Philosophical Societies.

Western Displays Tremendous Drive At Molson Stadium

Entire Game Played In Mud, Driving Rain

By NORM WOLFE

Slipping, sliding and stumbling their way through a quagmire whose resemblance to a football field was purely coincidental, Western University's much-publicized Mustangs downed McGill Redmen by a 22-0 margin Saturday afternoon. Among the estimated 6,000 hardy spectators who braved a cold, driving rain to witness the match, was Viscount Alexander, Governor-General of Canada, who was comparatively safely ensconced neath a shelter at the top of the stands.

CCF to Hold Talk On Value of Frats

The CCF Club will hold a meeting today at 1 p.m. in the new room of the Union. The topic to be discussed will be the value of fraternities on the campus.

Each speaker will be allowed three minutes in which to express his opinions. Following this, the discussion will be open for audience participation. Questions may be asked or further information may be added to the discussion.

The board of experts will include Peter Scott, vice-president of the Union and a third year Economics and Philosophy student; Bill Tetley, a member of the executive of the Debating Union and Sigma Chi representative to the Interfraternity Council; and Mike Oliver, chairman of NFCUS committee on discrimination, and last year's candidate for the president of the Student Society.

Student Veterans

All veterans are urged to participate in the Remembrance Day Service at the Cenotaph, Dominion Square, Tuesday, November 11th. If there is no unit with which you may form, please report to Frank Common south-west of the cenotaph BEFORE 10:15 a.m. Tuesday, November 11th. In order to arrange adequate parade space please leave your name at Ft. 1638 between 6 and 9 p.m. tonight, Monday, November 10th. Dress will be Muff, with medals and decorations.

NFCUS Says Forum to Take Place in Union

A general meeting of the McGill Committee of the National Federation of Canadian University Students (NFCUS) will be held on Wednesday, November 12th at 3 p.m. in the Union New Room.

This second general meeting will proceed with the organization of the McGill NFCUS Council and an Inter-University Student Forum as well as deal with proposed constitutional amendments.

The McGill NFCUS Council, it was stated, will be a body whose purpose will be to integrate the activities of the McGill campus organizations. The Proposed Council will hold regular meetings at which all aspects of student activities can be discussed by the clubs concerned.

The proposed Inter-University Student Forum will bring together students from universities and colleges in the Montreal area for open discussion of international affairs and politics. Tentative plans for this Forum favor the "Town Meeting of the Air" set-up complete with roving mike, etc., it has been announced.

The question of constitutional amendments will be dealt with. The following points require attention:

1. The nomination of the Chairman.
 2. The re-wording of the statement under "Object" (Art 2) to provide for the proposed NFCUS Council.
- The meeting is open to all members of the student body.

The loss stretched the Red and White's winless streak to ten straight games, the McGillians having won their last match when the Governor-General inaugurated the 1946 season at Molson Stadium against Queen's. But the inspiration of His Excellency's presence at Saturday's contest couldn't stem the Purple tide, and the winners stretched their impressive victory skein to 21 straight triumphs.

The slippery ball combined with some vicious tackling by Vic Obeck's charges gave the Redmen possession of the pigskin deep in Western territory on fumbles several times during the tilt, but the Red and White were unable to unleash anything even remotely resembling an offensive. With swiftness Murray Hayes on the sidelines with a leg injury, and McGill's sole heavy halfback, Doug Heron, injured in the first quarter, the Red and Whites only effective ball-carrier was plucky 150-pound Rocky Robillard. Therefore the Redmen were forced to play strictly defensive ball, something they were quite proficient at on Saturday.

Obeck Initiative

But no defenders in the country could hope to be able to bottle up the great Mustang attack all afternoon, and the locals were no exception. Spearheaded by speedy Jack Parry, elusive George Curtis, and hard-hitting George Arnott, the Metrasmen clicked for four touchdowns, two of which they converted. The most exciting play was little George Curtis' brilliant 83 yard run from his own 22 to a t.d. at the start of the final quarter. The classy Mustang captain broke through the line on an off-tackle play, behind beautiful blockings, then reversed his field sharply to scamper past off-balance McGill defenders and sprint all the way down the field.

Vic Obeck unveiled a unique 3-6-2-1 defensive formation which proved to be the most effective device employed against the Mustangs to date. Several times the Redmen broke through the Purple and White front wall to smear their brilliant backs for huge losses, but the Redmen's inability to get their own offence functioning gave the visitors possession of the pigskin most of the afternoon. On top of that, several bad snaps by McGill resulted in great opportunities for the Londoners, on most of which they were unable to capitalize.

Outstanding Players

For the Metrasmen, George Curtis collected two majors, Bob Mac-

REMEMBRANCE DAY

Tomorrow is Remembrance Day. This is the day which we set aside to remember those who died in the two great wars for which civilized society is responsible. After each great war, there was a period of intense feeling toward the dead; Remembrance Day was generally observed with a great deal of emotion and sadness. But as time left the wars behind, the feeling declined in proportion, and even tomorrow we venture to say that Remembrance Day will be observed with less intensity and seriousness than previously. These, perhaps, are the ways of human nature. We tend, thankfully, to forget those who have died. But what is indeed more tragic, is the fact that we tend to forget the things for which they died. As in the case of Remembrance Day, we pay tribute to those who gave their lives to preserve freedom, democracy, a way of life; those who died to give us peace—a peace which the deceased themselves would wish most to preserve. But as the remembrance slips slowly from our grasp, so does the peace, the freedom, the way of life. Basic disagreement and discrimination abound; fundamental discord and talk of war pass over the conference tables and are reported in the press. There can be no doubt that the ordinary people of the world are peaceful by nature and by intent. They wish to pursue their lives in the comfort and peace to which they are entitled. Tomorrow, let us try to remember what it is we want, not war, but peace. Let us be constructive, not destructive. And on this basis, it might be well to declare each and every day a "Remembrance Day." —A.T.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

S.C.M. Replies

S. C. M. House, 3574 University St., Montreal, Que., November 7, 1947. The Editor, McGill Daily, McGill University, Dear Sir: We reply to Reader Dolfuss on "God and Land." We see no reason to be afraid of "wading into a field where learned theologians would fear to tread." Apart from the fact that no less a person than the late Archbishop of Canterbury, William Temple, went to the extent of writing "Christianity and Social Order," and other books, advocating socialism, we feel that there is a definite need among students to concern themselves with the relevance of Christianity to political and social issues. In considering this matter, the majority of S. C. M. leaders in sixteen Canadian Universities presented at their National Council a report, of which only an incomplete condensation could be published in the Daily of Tuesday, November 4th. To answer Reader Dolfuss' questions then: 1. Stewardship of land and the means of production implies the use of them for the common benefit, and not for private profit gained by exploitation of labour. 2. The S. C. M. does not condemn any one, but rather a social system. Only God may condemn people. 3. We fail to see the illogicality of the S. C. M. conclusion that ownership should be social. It arises from a realistic appraisal of man, the individual, as unable to fulfill a stewardship which is the God-given responsibility of mankind in society. 4. These statements represent a Christian opinion which we cannot attribute to a single "theologian." They represent the thinking of a sincere group of students. Yours truly, EXECUTIVE OF S. C. M.

Horseplay

The Editor, The McGill Daily, Dear Sir: It has come to our attention that it is becoming increasingly difficult to distinguish between the gentlemen who tend the horses outside the union and those who insist on playing black-ball within. In spite of repeated requests that they move themselves and their equine friends from the front of the union, these first-named gentlemen (and their horses) insist on polluting our fine city all where they stand. The same is true of these black-ball players. These aforementioned players start their game at the time of their first lecture and play throughout the day, additional players keeping the game going. It is thus almost impossible for earnest students like the undersigned to get in a quick game between lectures. Another problem is that of professional bridge players. It is our opinion that all persons who insist on making their livelihood in these questionable pursuits of blackball and bridge should be asked to support themselves in institutions other than that for the Advancement of Learning. We suggest: Karoly's Recreational Academy (courses leading to a degree of B.U.M.), or the Forum Billiard Emporium. Yours, etc., RED TIMMINS, JOHN PIPER.

Lecture Lament

The Editor, McGill Daily, Dear Sir: There is a familiar saying, "Better late than never," but in our case, it is better to come never than to come late. We are two Freshettes who thought that lectures did not begin until five minutes after the hour. However, we find that upon arriving at a certain Maths. lecture at three minutes after the hour, we are greeted with insulting looks, besides having missed part of an explanation of a difficult problem. Our difficult problem is—should we arrive earlier or should the professor start later? THE TWO R's.

THE SAINT SOLVES THE HOUSING PROJECT

By DAVID AND GOLIATH

"Ungrateful wretches!" muttered the stealthy figure, moving like a shadow towards the Grill Room and worming his way into it through the key-hole, slightly damaging his neat black homburg hat in the process. Lunging towards the piano, the Saint swiftly swept aside the ancient relic. There, huddled on the floor, lay the culprits. "Get up!" rasped the Champion of Virtue. "How dare you squat in these sacred precincts? Like thieves in the night, perfidious rogues, you committed remorselessly this sacrilege against the rights of private property. Disgusting? Both of you, take your brood and chattels and vacate these premises at once!" "But, Saint," mourned the Mournful one, "we've got no place to go! Both Penniless Perkins and myself have been forcefully evicted from our Camillienne on Phillips Square. . . . The only place we could think of was our students' Union. We spend most of our lives here anyway, so we thought we might as well bring our wives and kids." "Sh-h, not so loud! Mustn't let this leak out. . . . scandal, y'know. . . . what with elections around the corner. . . . I warned you before that from now on I am to be the first consulted when you are faced with any problem!" admonished the Saint. In the meantime, the sleeping infants had been aroused, and the flustered mothers tried to soothe them by pushing empty Coke bottles into their hungry little mouths, all to no avail. Amidst sounds of grinding cerebral mechanism, the Saint endeavored to put his supernatural powers of intellect to the service of Justice in this latest battle against Crime. He immediately hit upon a scheme, and the grinning stopped. "Wait here until I get back" he advised as he vanished in the early morning gloom. Swift as a disappearing D.V.A. cheque, the silken clad figure ascended the Western terraces of Mount Olympus.

He stopped on the manorial estates of his Good Friend, the Baron Chizleminde, the Third. "Haha! my hyper-preceptionary faculties have served me well. The baron has completed the construction of his new stables. The discarded stalls shall serve my purpose. . . . Of course I shall have to convince the baroness to give priority to student veterans." His usually inscrutable countenance radiant with satisfaction, the Saint descended once again upon the hapless outcasts. He found them silent and sorrowful, sitting on a floor now littered with bits of finger-nails. Penniless and Mournful sprang to their feet. "Thank God you're back! These inveterate Union habits will soon flock here and trample our young ones!" Penniless wailed. The Saint, with a sympathetic smile appearing above his white satin scarf, said in a mellow voice: "Your problems are solved. I have found suitable accommodation for both your families. There is, however, a slight obstacle to be overcome, but that is no worry of yours. I am certain the baroness Chizleminde III will generously sacrifice her original plan of using the premises to lodge her enlarged domestic staff. With this he winked at Mournful Mullins and nudged him in the ribs. "Recently imported stuff, y'know. Haha!" Suddenly realizing that zero hour of the invasion by 9 o'clock lectures refugees was fast approaching, the Saint ordered the two veteran students and their happy families to quickly pack all their belongings. Penniless informed him that this had already been done, since they always wore their complete wardrobe wherever they went. The Saint whistled to the one-horse shay in front of Suicidick Gates, and packed them all off to their new habitat. And thus, once again, the Saint saved the day. Law and order prevailed.

Film with Ballet . . . and Michael Chekov . . . Avenue

"Specter of the Rose" is the film that none of the big first-run houses in town would touch. They said it had no mass appeal. Perhaps not, but it has some very good acting, notably a gem of a "character" role that is admirably executed by Michael Chekov—the comparison with Marius Goring's performance in "Stairway to Heaven" is irresistible. Judith Anderson did full justice to the part of a broken-down ballerina who runs a school—but unfortunately the part was a trifle stereotyped. Lionel Stander, as an individualist poet, was suitably ominous and omnipresent, and managed to throw away his universal utterances to just the right degree. Of course the central interest lies in Ivan Kirov, the mad dancing genius (shades of Nijinsky), and Viola Essen, a ballerina. And they can act as well as dance. There is one of the most original, and moving, love scenes that have been in films between them. It takes place in a crowded hotel lobby, and the principals are a yard apart—how-ever! The ballet sequences are quite good, but unfortunately the version of "Spectre de la Rose" that is presented is extensively cut. The other sequences (aside from a montage scene with which you can play a fascinating game of "What's that ballet?") are choreographed for the occasion by Tamara Geva with George Antheil's music. Their high points are a warming-up routine for Kirov (with some very neat entrechats) and of course Kirov's "Dance of Death", which expresses the dancer's mad mind very immediately. The whole thing was written, produced and directed by Ben Hecht on a very low budget from Republic, and he's done a good job. Occasionally the lighting is not all one could wish for, and the production as a whole moves a trifle jerkily, but Ben Hecht recreates very successfully the artificial world of ballet and theatre in which the action takes place—by overdrawing each character part. Also on the programme (in order of merit) are: a cartoon that is a Hungarian Rhapsody in the manner of Fantasia, "Rendezvous With Annie" (which is "from a magazine story" and is quite amusing as it manages not to take itself too seriously, but is structurally loose), and a sentimental Technicolor circus horse. The news also, is always with us.—W. D. M.

Inspector is no ordinary sleuth . . . Imperial

The J. Arthur Rank Productions again call forth our unequivocal praise, this time for an excellent and unusual murder mystery. The scene is an emergency hospital set in lovely grounds; the period 1944, when flying-bombs came like blazing scimitars out of the blue; the murderers and suspects are, with one exception, staff of the hospital; and the detective is the amazing umbrella-carrying Inspector Cockrill of New Scotland Yard. The story is handled with exquisite care, and the mystery is sustained until the end, which is tinged with unexpected irony. An interesting variant of the flashback method is particularly worthy of mention, and we are delighted by the vision of the good Inspector cowering from a flying-bomb while he tells us that he pursued his detecting undisturbed by such unpleasant interruptions. There are several similar scenes, but the idea is never overworked. Alistair Sim is quite superb as the Inspector. Here we have no ordinary sleuth, but one who seems to derive much glee from the embarrassment of his suspects, and who, praise be, is not infallible. The acting of the entire cast is excellent, but a special eulogy is due to the velvet-voiced Leo Genn as the surgeon and to the nurse of Mags Jenkins. The London Symphony Orchestra conducted by Muir Matheson has become an integral part of all Arthur Rank productions, and William Alwyn has provided us with some excellent incidental music. One of the Crime Doctor series, The Millerson Case, starring Warner Baxter, and a short film, Big Time Revue, complete the programme. Both are unremarkable.—P. K. and B. S.

Feeding and fainting stop music . . . Palace

This week's music comes through the courtesy of Brahms, Liszt and Schumann, played by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Symphony Orchestra, Paul Henreid will conduct, and Katherine Hepburn will be featured pianist. The Emperor will attend. "Song of Love", is a glowing example of what can happen when good music becomes involved with an indifferent plot. One wonders who is interrupting who—the musicians or the actors. It seems rather a shame because the music heard is not only worthy of presentation, but ably played. However, the usual happens. Schumann selection is cut and rushed in order that Mamma Schumann can feed her youngest offspring in her dressing-room. Pappa Schumann takes a fainting fit in the most beautiful portion of "Faust", while Brahms cannot finish his piano rendition because of a sudden infatuation for another man's wife, mother of seven children! The acting is competent enough, but there just isn't enough good dialogue to go around. Robert Walker is exceptionally good as Brahms, but what can be possibly do with such a line as: "You may be older than I . . . but the years haven't touched you." Paul Henreid is a typical composer, no more, complete with accent and demented stare. Katherine Hepburn is far too Hepburnish, and uses too much glycerine. Surprisingly enough, the piano arrangements were accompanied with considerable surface noise, which made the dubbing in rather obvious. Lastly, a word about the settings. It is a trifle on the ridiculous side to hear Mother and Father bewailing their poverty in a mansion containing half-a-dozen grand pianos—and a maid. Still, if you like children, then by all means this is the picture for you. There are seven belonging to Schumann, and all of them are "cute".—B. R.

Pianist Scores

Anatole Kitain, in his second Montreal performance last Friday evening, showed himself to be a fine pianist with a great technique, a compelling fullness of tone and a complete control of his capacities. Compositions like the Carnival by Schumann and the etudes by Scriabine which usually present insurmountable difficulties, even to the most accomplished of artists, were played in a whimsically easy fashion. Mr. Kitain opened his long and rather prodigious program with a Mozart fantasy where his prolonged pianissimos displayed a finesse of shading within a dynamism of softness. The Schumann Carnival was characterized by some realistic portrayals of the various circus characters and by a poetic interpretation of the simple themes. The first half of the program ended with a group of Chopin compositions including the Etude No. 5 and the Grande Polonaise. They were played with an originality of expression that was marred by a slight exaggeration of tempo resulting in a loss of neatness. This was most noticeable in the Andante of the Grande Polonaise which was played too quickly to grasp the meaning of the composer. To modern Russians the Grande Etude for the left hand by Alkan must have seemed musically poor, though technically good. The two (Continued on page 4.)

Recital by Students Pleasing to Critic

A rather notable group of performers of works for the piano was given by students of Mr. Bernard Symons at the Faculty of Music on Friday evening. The pupils, on the whole, played with a good deal of technical ability and a satisfying amount of thought out interpretation.

Ruth Hutchison started the program with a performance of the first movement of Beethoven's Concerto in C, No. 1. A delicate opening was followed by some very pleasantly played lyrical passages that went to make up an enjoyable, if somewhat stiff, performance. She was followed by Anthony Prower who gave a rendition of Brahms' lovely Ballade in G Minor. His interpretation of the beginning and the end were perhaps too light for those portions of the piece which should be attacked robustly, but the middle section was adequately rendered.

The first movement of Schumann's Concerto in A Minor was given a strong treatment by Barbara Goodwin. A slight overuse of the pedal was the only deduction from a performance that was notable for its very good technique and subtle interpretation of the cadenza. Next on the program was Charlotte Barrier who performed Beethoven's Sonata in F Sharp. Good shading and refined contrasts together formed a pleasant execution.

Loyola Defeats McGill in Intermediate Grid Encounter

Cowan Outstanding As Victors Capture Loop Championship

The purple and white gridders from Loyola stamped out McGill's last chance for a share of this season's football glory as they displayed a powerful ground attack that carried them to a 17-1 victory and the intermediate intercollegiate championship. It was just a case of too much Cowan as the loose-hipped back threaded his way thru the McGill line after time for long gains. In contrast with the usual gridiron bruiser this Loyola line smasher is just a little fellow standing not more than five six. He relies more on a deceptive stride and football acumen than sheer power to reel off his yards. To add to the Meteor's woes was Gutelius, another half of the same type and just as elusive.

The Loyola laddies racked up long gains on the ground in the early part of the first half. But once it became evident that they didn't possess a passing attack the McGill defense was able to set itself, and managed to throttle the westender's attack quite effectively, having only a scratch single on Sutherland's kick to the deadline entered in the score book against them by half time.

PEP TALK

What transpired in the Loyola dressing room during the interval is a matter of conjecture, but regardless of its nature it served the purpose. Capitalizing on a McGill fumble and a "no yards" penalty they sent Gutelius across for two quick touchdowns, but failed to convert either. McGill staged a minor rally, picking up their lone marker when Young's kick rolled out of touch behind the Loyola goal line. Sutherland, the Loyola quarter terminated the scoring as he romped over standing up from the Redmen's twenty-five in the dying seconds of the game.

NO OFFENSIVE

McGill's loss may be attributed to their inability to sustain an effective ground or air offensive. In fact, Knobby Laing was the only Red back able to cross the line of scrimmage with any degree of consistency. Johnny Young turned in a creditable performance at quarter, leaving the Loyola supporters slightly astounded when his field goal attempt from their forty-five yard line struck the crossbar. Along the line Wickham, Warden and Henderson made successful forays into the Loyola backfield.

Now that they are in possession of the league title it is rumored that Loyola will default their game next Saturday with Dawson and instead meet the Ottawa U Squad. The latter have been undefeated so far this year playing in a league with two other capital city colleges and Queen's intermediates. It is possible that this game will be billed as the Eastern Intercollegiate Intermediate Championship.

SOCCER NOTICE

There will be a game against Dawson on Tuesday afternoon at 12:30 in the gym. Fainstat, B. Smith, Lindo, Wolvin, Foster, Patterson, Dale, Ferrier, Hayward, A. C. Ellington, O'Brien, Ammon, Samuel, Bernard. Anyone who will be unable to play is requested to phone Don Wolvin at LA. 8503.

Royals Defeat McGill In Junior Puck Loop

Led by Freddie Burthel and Keith McManian, with 4 and 3 goals respectively, the Junior Royals downed a scrappy, but badly disorganized McGill Junior team 8-1, last Saturday at the Forum. This was the first game in the Mount Royal Junior League.

With poor backchecking the McGill defence were forced to break up many Royals forays with Sandy Edmison proving himself a solid guardian for McGill.

The Royals showed a well balanced team with their forward lines swarming like flies into the McGill defence zone.

Puck Seconds Hold Drill At Verdun Aud'm.

Tomorrow is Remembrance Day. Consequently it is hoped that all intermediate hockey players will remember that there is a practice at the Verdun Auditorium starting at five in the afternoon. This practice is open to anyone (repeat "anyone") who has developed beyond the chesscut stage of puckchasing. Coach Ross Hutchins is still searching for talent and if it happens to come his way he is not loath to it, even if it is the easy way.

For the edification of those who are not sure as to how to reach the Aud. look herein. Take a streetcar to the corner of Atwater and Ste. Catherine and from there transfer to a LaSalle bus going to Verdun. It will leave you off at the Arena, or at least within walking distance. The Aud has one of the best ice surfaces in this neck of the woods, with good locker room facilities and a snack bar.

GRID HELP

The change from football cleats to skates does not seem to present much of a problem as a good number of Obeek's minions will make this transition at the end of the football season. Among those to don the winged blades are Doug Heron, Murray Hayes, Don Bussiere, Rocky Robillard and Johnny Meagher. All are quite proficient at the pastime and strengthen any team they hook onto.

Another griddier who had the best of intentions but, regrettably, was not able to carry them out, is Bill Orban, who suffered a torn ligament in his leg at London. Wild Bill did some effective toiling for the Fizzeds in the Intramural loop last year and was looked upon as a promising candidate for the senior pucksters.

BRIGHT RED LIGHTS

Here are two of the stalwarts of the Senior McGill Intercollegiate gridiron entry who were among the few bright lights for the Redmen in an otherwise dusky Saturday afternoon at the Molson Stadium, where the Mustangs romped through our home-town favourites to score a decisive 22-0 victory. JOHNNY HALL is on the left while TOMMY BRIDAL is pictured right beside him.

'Try' Again

Red Rugger Squad Downed 5-0 by Strong Varsity Club

The teams had met once before this season at Molson Stadium and on that occasion the score was a draw. This time, in a hard fought tussle at Varsity Stadium, Toronto defeated McGill 5-0. The play was open and fast, and the only score of the game came within the first ten minutes. This happened when Don Glenn of the Varsity side went over the McGill line for a try which was converted by Dick Oddy to give the home-owners a 5-0 edge. The latter, a tall Australian, will be remembered as the man who made the fifty-yard place kick two weeks ago.

There is more interest in Rugger at Varsity than here apparently, for there was a considerable crowd out to watch the match, and they evidently enjoyed the hard playing which followed this initial score. The long kicks that the McGill full-back got away were among some of the more spectacular of the plays, and the captain, John Whitehead, did some good running and passing. The McGill scrum-half, Whittall, is one of the students we have here from England, and his knowledge of the game was invaluable to the team.

INJURY RIDDEN

There is no substitution in English Rugger, and if a man is injured too badly to play, his team carries on without him. For this reason it was unfortunate that Quain of the McGill team had to be carried off the field. Johnny Venters received a broken nose, and Floyer injured his knee, but both of these men continued to play for the McGill side until the end of the game. Varsity too had several minor injuries, notably Adam Zimmerman who hurt his thumb, but McGill seemed to get the hardest luck as far as manpower was concerned.

In the second half Varsity opened up their style of play even more in the hope of getting a more definite lead on McGill, and very nearly did more than once. But

TOMORROW'S FROLICS

In case that you are wondering what to do on the holiday this coming Tuesday, here is a suggestion. Early that morning force yourself out of that warm comfortable bed and ignoring your holiday finery robe yourself in some old tattered garments, you know, the ones you use for lectures. Pay an exorbitant price for a ticket to Shawbridge and catch up your sleep on the train, if you can in the middle of all the noise that a holiday crowd usually makes.

At Shawbridge you can strain your back trail-clearing, or lose yourself hiking, and later poison yourself eating the food that you will have a hand in preparing. When you get home you will agree that it was a Remembrance Day that you will remember.

Combines, Alkies Floor Hockey Victors

In the McGill Floor Hockey League, Combines, with their 6-0 victory over the Flashes, consolidated their hold on first place. In the second game the Alkies, led by Harry Leavitt with 3 goals, defeated Phys-Eds 7-3.

In the first game the scorers were Lewis, McVittie, Woodcock, Perron, Malone, and Cranston. The best for the Flashes was Sam Winter, with Al Patton playing sensationally in their goal.

The Alkies-Phys-Eds game saw 9 minutes in penalties handed out. Scorers for the Alkies were Leavitt (3), Fullerton (2), with Presho and Woodward accounting for the other two. For the losers Russell, with two, and Spence completed the scoring. The schedule continues on Friday with Stars and Commercials meeting at 5:15 and Plumbers and Vfrings tangling in the second game.

Fenton Garners First Place In Five Mile Race

The man who tied for first place last year in the Provincial five mile road race came through on top again in Saturday's run, this time with nobody to share the honors with him. Paul Fenton Jr. led the field with a time of 27:18 minutes.

Due to the inclement weather only 18 of the expected 25 entrants participated in the race. On the outset Fenton set a terrific pace and was the only man of the six entrants from McGill to place. He was closely followed by Brooks and Evans of the M.T.F.C., but they failed to break the murderous pace. These three took an early lead and remained in that order throughout the race.

The marathon was run on Saturday on a course laid around the North end of the city. It began and ended at the North Branch Y. This year McGill were defending champions, but even with Fenton's win the aggregate went to the M.T.F.C.

Women's Union Meet Scheduled for Nov. 17

On Monday, November 17, the Women's Union will hold its annual meeting in the R.V.C. Gym. Tea will be served at 4:30, and the meeting will begin at 5:00. The meeting will be designed to give the women students at McGill some insight into what the Women's Union is, and what it does for them, and to discuss plans for the coming year. It is also planned to amend the Constitution, so that two new members of the Executive will be included.

At the meeting, women students will have an opportunity to hear how their Women's Union fee is being used, and how the aims of the Women's Union—to promote social, cultural and recreational activities for the women of the campus—are being implemented. All women students who have paid their Undergraduate Societies fee are members of the Union, and are entitled to attend its meetings.

Six Groups Assemble For Weekend

Outstanding activity is afoot among McGill graduates, with no fewer than six class reunions scheduled for this week-end.

On Friday evening the graduates of the '37 Commerce class will meet at the Queens Hotel. The dinner will be organized by Ian Craig. Commerce '35 is also having its reunion in the Montreal Badminton and Squash Club Saturday at noon. The luncheon will be organized by Wally Markham, former half-back and later football coach at Dawson College.

Four different classes are holding dinner reunions after the game on Saturday. The Science class of 1908 sets the record in annual reunions — its thirty-ninth will be held at the University Club.

The LaSalle Hotel is the site chosen for reunion of the Science graduates of 1925 and for the Engineers of '35. The latter will be addressed by Professor Wallace of the Electrical Engineering Department. J. S. Wallace and Ned Hankin are organizing the reunion of the 1934 Engineering class to be held at the Queens Hotel.

Farlane one, and George Arnott the final one. The Purple line showed their usual proficient blocking, while Bill Jarvie played a great defensive game at the inside position. Wally Kowal, a converted backfielder who has improved with every showing, played outstanding ball on the McGill line. Kowal also recovered around three fumbles. Nickerson, Porter, Smythe and Bridel also showed well defensively, while Johnny Hall and Rocky Robillard were the pick of the backfield.

The Jester

by Fred Cleman

This is a second in a series of columns on topics sundry and humorous. The first appeared a few weeks ago, and most of you probably read it and promptly forgot it. Which I am advised is a very good thing.

Let me first elucidate on the question of humour in The Daily. Every time a joke is published, a number of readers go around telling all who will listen that, "Why, that joke is so old even Adam wouldn't had the nerve to tell it to Eve. And here, some Joker is trying to pawn it off on us."

Well, in my case, I will certainly concede that some of the material used is borrowed, BUT, it is borrowed from only the VERY BEST of sources. On with the Column!

DAFFYNITIONS

A very popular, though not new, type of humour is concerned with definitions, in this form called daffynitions. A form of satire, it employs a technique referred to in trade circles as the "switcheroo." It is a very clever type of humour, and a clear justification of the adage, "Many a truth is spoken in jest."

Here are a few of the better ones.

Acquaintance: A person you know well enough to borrow from, but not well enough to lend to.

Admiration: Our polite recognition of someone's resemblance to ourselves.

Afternoon Snack: The pause that refreshes.

Alimony: Man's cash surrender value.

Alimony: The high cost of leaving.

Ambiguity: Telling the truth when you don't mean to.

Baby: An alimentary canal with a loud voice at one end and no responsibility at the other.

Boaster: A person who, every time he opens his mouth, puts his feet in it.

Bostonian: An American; broadly speaking.

Bridge: A card game in which a good deal depends on a good deal.

Burlesque: Not a real show; just a take-off.

Bustle: A deceitful scarf.

Cauliflower: A cabbage with a college education.

Chaplain: An army officer who works to beat hell.

Cocktail: An ice-cube with an alcohol rub.

Croquette: Hash that has come to a head.

Divorcee: A person who grows richer by decrees.

Highbrow: A person who discusses sex and makes you think he meant it all in a purely intellectual way.

Hug: A round-about way of expressing affection.

Hula-dancer: A shake in the grass.

Humorist: A writer who shows us the faults of human nature in such a way that we recognize our failings and smile; and our neighbors' and laugh.

Iron: Discovered because someone smelt it.

Mug Wump: A bird that sits on a fence with its mug on one end and its wump on the other.

Oboe: An American tramp.

Peeping-Tom: A wolf, window-shopping.

Pink Elephant: A beast of bourbon.

Prune: A plum that has seen better days.

Rhubarb: A dance where the front of you makes like a Cadillac and the back of you makes like a jeep.

Soviet: A cloth used by waiters in hotels.

Spinal Column: A long bunch of bones. The head sits on one end and you sit on the other.

Sympathy: What one girl offers another in exchange for details.

Tabloid: A newspaper with a permanent crime wave.

Talleyrand: A female dancer (and cut the baby talk).

Vegetable Soup: Stew; only looser.

Waffle: A pancake with a non-skid tread.

Whisky: Civilian plasma.

Wink: A whether signal.

Wolf: A man who whistles at his work.

I should be pleased to assemble other favorites contributed by readers, with a view to publishing them as a column at a later date.

P.C. Amendment

That the following be added as

Clauses 5 and 6:

5. That the hesitant and apologetic course hitherto pursued by the Government with respect to immigration be immediately reversed and replaced by a positive and large-scale plan to attract the finest type of immigrant to Canada, thus assuring this programme of industrial expansion both the personnel to carry it out and the market to absorb its produce. At the same time it will fulfill the grave responsibility which Canada has to the suffering people of Europe.

6. That the Government undertake immediately a subsidized low-rental housing scheme designed to provide the housing necessary for the absorption of the new population provided by clause No. 5, and also for those in the lower wage brackets for whom the provision of adequate housing is beyond the scope of private enterprise.

etudes by Scriabine were played with a virtuosity that literally tore down the house. The audience gasped at the stupendous rapidity of one finger note alterations.

Inspired by the warm reception he received, Mr. Kitain gave five encores including the ever-martyred Chopin Polonaise, which suffered a slight redemption.

The wide range of his music as shown by the length of the program, the delicacy of his shading and contrasts and the evenness and purity of his technique establish Mr. Kitain as a great pianist. J.L.

ed Cesar Franck's Symphonic Variations. Miss Wilson's clear, well thought out interpretation never once sank to the dullness which so often accompanies this piece when in the hands of students of lesser interpretative ability. If the slight reluctance was due to a nervousness about the performance on Miss Wilson's part, it was completely unwarranted.

The Grande Polonaise, Opus 22, by Chopin was performed by Lenore Mahase. A beautifully singing treble played against an effectively heavy base produced a poetical, though reserved, rendition.

If there was a more outstanding performance during the evening than Jacob Siskind's playing of the first movement of the Concerto in E Flat No. 3 by Beethoven, it quite missed this reviewer's notice. Mr. Siskind showed a degree of control, especially in the upper treble, that would have been amazing in any pianist but was even more so in a student. The technical ability was easily matched by the interpretation which was obviously the result of careful thought and study. This combined with a sureness of touch and pedalling made up a performance that was highly gratifying.

The second piano accompaniments for the concert were all performed by Mr. Symons, the teacher of the students. Both Mr. Symons and the Faculty of Music are to be congratulated on a definitely successful recital. G. J. E.

Committee, valid. An examination passed by a majority of the members voting.

The proposed amendment to the Constitution is, in the opinion of the Chairman of the Constitutional of the Constitution shows that neither procedure is in conflict with it and both plans are therefore considered to be in order.

Article VI presently reads as follows:

Article VI. Voting

Section 1: Any amendments to the constitution or any debate regarding the future policy of the Society, or any similar problems which may arise in the future, will be effected by a majority vote of the bona fide membership.

Section 2: For an ordinary business meeting a quorum shall constitute fifty per cent of the total membership.

Section 3: Any motion must be passed by a majority of the members present.

The change in Section 1 has been made because it is felt that nearly all problems arising at meetings of the society regard "the future policy of the Society, or any similar problems which may arise in the future." It should be possible to handle them at an ordinary meeting with a quorum. With regard to the suggested change in Section 2: if there were a large enrollment at the time of balloting in the coming election, it might be very difficult to obtain fifty per cent of the then total membership. The figure suggested instead is felt to be reasonable considering all circumstances. In Section 3 the word "present" has been changed to the word "voting" in order to cover votes made otherwise than at a meeting.

In accordance with the resolution passed at the last General Meeting of the McGill Student Veterans' Society nominations were closed at midnight, Friday, November 7th. Here follows a list of the nominees to the several offices: President: C. Hugh Borsman; John T. Sangster; W. A. Strover; Vice-Pres: Peter Kohl; Dick J. Hunter; Secretary: Susan Ketchum; Alex Lane; Treasurer: Mrs. Alex Lane; Bernard Rubenstein; Publicity: Alan Finlay; Grant Roberts; Housing Director: David Ledoux; Dick Auscola.

THE COMMERCE DEBATING CLUB promises a heated debate this afternoon at 3 p.m. on the weighty topic "Styles and the New Look are threatened by Government Regulations." The CHESS AND CHECKERS tournament starts tonight at 8 p.m. in the Union Grill Room. For something a bit more strenuous the MODERN DANCE CLUB reminds all those who signed up at the beginning of the year that activities have started. Their Junior Club meets on Mondays at 4:00 in the Upper Gym of R.V.C.

On the political side we find the L.P.P.'s holding their caucus in the Music Room at 3 p.m. this afternoon in preparation for Mock Parliament. The MCGILL LIBERAL CLUB meet at 1 p.m. this noon in the Board Room of the McGill Union for their discussion on the forthcoming session of Model Parliament. The C.C.F. CLUB is sponsoring a tour of various Community Centres in Montreal, Saturday afternoon, November 15th. The group on tour will also meet Sgt. Pelletier of the Montreal Police Morality Squad. Further details are to be announced in The Daily.

Muir Wood, a fourth year power student, is slated to speak on the Shawinigan Falls Power House at the MCGILL ELECTRICAL CLUB meeting Wednesday, November 12 between 1 and 2 p.m. Practical people are reminded to bring their lunches. A live musicale, 8 p.m. Tuesday night at the HILLEL CLUB rounds out the near future campus activities. Hillel's lecture series resumes this Wednesday night, with Dr. Eisenstein as speaker. THE WOMEN'S HISTORICAL SOCIETY will hear Miss Dorothy Ross, M.A., PH.D., at their meeting at 8.15 to-night in the R.V.C. Common Room. Her subject will be Simple Sinner 400 years ago.

LETTER FORUM

What, No Climax?

The Editor,
McGill Daily,
Montreal, Que.

Dear Sir:

On page five, column 2 of The Daily, of November 7th, there appears a charming little tale concerning a man exhibiting a strange form of behaviour in the Pennsylvania Station.

Admittedly, this was fascinating filler, but to our feeble intellects, the climax seemed to be lacking. Perhaps the author would be willing to complete the story.

We trust that this too, may serve to fill some vacant spot in The Daily's columns.

THREE HOPEFUL CO-EDS.

Ed. Note: The climax of the tale which appeared in the issue of November 7 appears in the issue of November 6. Jokes are usually told the other way around, but we decided to be different.)
